

"HEMP PICNICS" URGED FOR MEN OF NEARING TYPE

NEW YORK, Jan. 11.—"If this war lasts much longer there will be hemp picnics in Central Park on Sunday mornings for just such as you," declared United States Marshal Thomas D. McCarthy in an address here in which he referred to Scott Nearing and some of his associates.

Nearing is today seeking the removal from office of McCarthy, charging him with publicity and specifically suggesting a resort to mob violence.

McCarthy is further credited with saying that "they will take you out and hang you to the handiest tree. It will be my job as an officer of the law to prevent this if I can. But I don't mind telling you that if I were not an officer of the law, sworn to prevent disorder, I would stand on the fringe of the crowd and clap my hands."

Nearing has been dismissed from

Shell Shock Is Easier On Married Men Than Bachelors In Trenches

BOSTON, Jan. 11.—Draw near, mates, and let this speak in:

"Married men in the trenches stand shell shock much better than the unmarried."

Capt. John T. McCurdy, of the medical officers' reserve corps, who has had long experience with cases of shell shock in our war hospitals abroad, eased off the foregoing information at a meeting of the Massachusetts Society for Mental Hygiene in the course of a speech on nervous and mental breakdown from war strain shell shock.

the faculties of two universities for his radical views, and is now chairman of the national executive committee of the People's Council of America.

DEFACED QUESTIONNAIRE, WOULDN'T GIVE ANSWERS

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Jan. 11.—Charged with defacing his questionnaire and refusing to answer the questions contained therein, Arnold Jacob Uhl, son of a prominent German paint manufacturer here, is held today by the Federal authorities. On his questionnaire, he wrote:

"I hereby claim my exemption given me by the Constitution of the United States from all military service, except for the purpose of enforcing the laws of the Union, suppressing insurrection, and repelling invasion."

SOUTH'S COLORED WOMEN ARE DOING WAR AID WORK

No one has paid much attention to what the negro "mammys" and educated black women of America are doing to help win the war, but they're doing their share just the same.

Paralleling the work and organizations of white women in the Southern branches of the Women's Committee of the Council of National Defense, the colored women are keeping even, and in some instances a jump or two ahead of the procession.

"The colored women," said a member of the National Defense Council's Woman's Committee today, "are valuable members of the women's army of America."

"They, too, have their men in the war, and are anxious and well able to do their part. They work under their own leaders and often have their own units. Tennessee is planning to organize the entire State in separate units and to encourage them to train for nursing."

Active in Maryland. "Colored teachers in Maryland are giving of the time that they have usually taken for much needed rest to do volunteer work and the State chairman including publicity reports that too much praise cannot be given to their devotion and patriotism."

"In New Orleans a negro woman lectures to other women cooks of the community on the value of sweat substitutes, and they have classes in food conservation in the municipal kitchen."

"Florida finds the co-operation of the colored people particularly valuable in the case of food conservation. In that State they are highly organized under a separate chairman of their own, who has her own organization, and they have units all over the State. Given responsibility and a chance to co-operate, they are immensely loyal and valuable to the work."

Camp Meade Visitor. "Maryland has a colored field secretary, who has been visiting the colored girls working at Camp Meade, and reports good conditions. She has established binding relations with all the workers and is keeping a record of them up to date."

"In Amelia, Md., the Amelia Current Opinion Club, composed of prominent colored women of that city, has taken up the study of food. In many counties the women are raising money to get wool for sweaters, and also to make comfort kits for men drafted from their counties."

"A chairman has been appointed in Georgia, who is organizing the colored women of that State."

"It was a great step in Louisiana when the colored women were asked to form one unit of the food conservation parade, in recognition of their able and faithful work in handling registration booths for their race."

GARFIELD BLAMED BY DOVE FOR COAL SITUATION IN D. C.

"We are suffering and have suffered from bad management and bad direction."

That's what the matter with the District of Columbia fuel situation in the opinion of J. Maury Dove, coal dealer, of this city, who testified last evening before the Senate subcommittee to investigate the national coal shortage.

"Wanted a practical man," might be said to be the epitome of Mr. Dove's testimony. He did not mince words in depicting the shortcomings of the existing system. He criticized the District Fuel Administration and the administration of Fuel Administrator Harry A. Garfield.

Not only that but he insisted that a plan which he outlined were followed, permanent relief would be given to the suffering population of the District.

Briefly, he urged that a new fuel administrator, a practical man, should be named for the District, that more coal be brought in for a short time, and that delivery be systematized in the way he believed a practical man could do.

Senator Reed, chairman of the committee, asked Mr. Dove to outline his plan. In response, Mr. Dove said:

"If we had a practical man given authority to make an order and authority to enforce that order, the city of Washington would get relief in forty-eight hours, and in ten days a coal shortage would be a thing of the past."

"It would be necessary to bring in 4,000 tons of coal per day for ten days, and after that 2,500 tons of coal daily. A practical man is needed to see to the delivery of coal. The supply could be delivered in such a way that the poor man could get his coal for 10 cents a peck, delivered, and there would be plenty left for the corner groceryman to fill his orders as well. I guarantee the full co-operation of the Washington coal dealers in an effort to solve the coal problem."

He had written, he said, to Garfield, saying it was an injustice to Washington and to the East to divert coal needed for this part of the country into the Northwest. He was informed in a reply from one of Garfield's subordinates that "he could not be bothered with such matters."

Mr. Dove's figures were that in previous years 350,000 tons of hard coal and 700,000 tons of soft coal had been shipped to Washington, and the region roundabout. Mr. Weaver told the committee the day before that he had had the greatest difficulty in getting data on this subject from the coal dealers.

Lack of Co-operation. The charge made by Mr. Dove of bad management of the local coal situation, plus the testimony of Mr. Weaver previously that he had been unable to get data from the coal men here, left little doubt that there has been lack of co-operation between the fuel administration and the local dealers.

L. A. Seward, some days ago declared he had not had the co-operation of the coal dealers.

Mr. Dove told the committee that last spring he had sent out a circular giving warning of coal shortage and higher prices, and urging early buying.

He said this had been called by one of the Federal trade commission as an attempt "to throw a scare into Washington."

He added that early buying had been termed "hoarding," but, in fact, it was "nothing but common sense."

Lodge Took Advice. "I took your advice, and I suppose I am a hoarder," observed Senator Lodge.

He said that while people took his advice and ordered coal early, he could not get coal because it was diverted to the Great Lakes country. He denied there was hoarding of coal by the citizens of Washington.

"Not a tenth of the usual amount was laid in advance," he asserted. He pronounced it folly to talk about co-ordination in delivery unless dealers could have coal.

When asked if the coal situation here was improving, Mr. Dove declared it was growing worse, and was worse than ever before.

He blamed shipments to the Great Lakes country for this condition.

"This is due," said he, "directly to shipments made to the Great Lakes region which deprived Washington of its natural fuel."

"During the last year," asserted Mr. Dove, "I have almost been directed out of business."

He said orders on his books placed there in April and May were still unfilled.

"Child's play," was the way Mr. Dove described the present system of commandeering teams and co-ordinating deliveries.

Moreover, he pronounced the card system of Fuel Administrator Weaver, as "theory."

"I do not think there is anything practical in it," said Mr. Dove.

"We had no interference in our distribution up to the past week," the witness said. "Now the Fuel Administration has commandeered our teams and co-ordinated delivery facilities to handle something that's not here. It's child's play. Our own teams could deliver all the coal now in Washington."

Questions asked by Senator Reed of witnesses in the coal hearing indicated that he was giving serious consideration to the idea of having the Government buy up all the coal at the mouth of the mine and then distributing it. The Fuel Administration has that power today, but it has never used it.

TOWN ICE-BOUND, ANNAPOLIS IN GRIP OF COAL FAMINE

ANNAPOLIS, Jan. 11.—Maryland's capital is in the grip of an acute coal shortage, and there is much suffering among rich and poor alike. The freeze in the bay and the Severn river has practically stopped all water traffic, and no relief is in sight.

The Naval Academy is seriously affected. It has but a week's supply of coal on hand.

Residents are endeavoring to keep warm with oil heaters and by burning coke and wood. Wealthy residents are taking coal home by the wheelbarrow load, if they can get it.

The one daily newspaper in the city faces suspension tomorrow because no anthracite coal for its one linotype machine can be obtained.

One small vessel was frozen in off Annapolis several weeks ago with sixty tons of coal on board. Residents without coal carted this off over the ice, and the last pound of it is gone.

COULDN'T HOLD DOWN HIS JOB

Blood Got So Bad Was Almost Paralyzed On One Side, Legs Swelled Up.

LAI D OFF FROM WORK FOR NEARLY FIVE YEARS

"After suffering for years and being unable to work I am glad to say that once more I feel my old self and am back on the job. I am grateful to those many men who had to give up work through poor health."

Miners, trainmen, mechanics and men of all kinds who spend most of their time out of doors, often lay-off and can't even hold down their jobs because of some blood or digestion trouble that gradually and like a thief in the night steals their strength and health away. Read what this well-known Princeton, W. Va., mechanic says about it.

"I suffered from blood poisoning on my leg and partial paralysis of one side of my body and had stomach trouble bad. I would wake up with a numbness on my whole left side. My leg swelled up and turned purple and it got so bad I was unable to work for nearly five years. Then a friend of mine advised me to get some Acid Iron Mineral and in three days after those long years of suffering my leg had except a tiny spot and that was gone soon afterwards. The numbness and paralysis left me and I feel better than I have felt in many years. It cured me of all my troubles and boosted me up so good I am back at work for the first time in years," writes W. H. Richards, Sr., Princeton, W. Va.

If a man lets his blood go until it is sluggish and full of acids and poisons he can hardly walk, much less keep up with the times. Many a man is plunging along hardly making both ends meet because bad health holds him back. The fellow who gets "over the top" of these high cost of living days is the fellow with speed, real health, red blood, good digestion and appetite; and for this thousands of people right here in Washington endorse Acid Iron Mineral.
